A long time ago in a land between a world and a different world, a war born from a myth devastated the lands and its inhabitants. For a thousand years the land has been in a state of quiet, but now... the Mythological Gods are returning from their sleep and the ruins of a holy city rise again. B'nai Brith Canada's investigator, Michael Mostyn, has accused Colin Robertson of wearing a mask while throwing stones at a B'nai Brith Canada office in 2013. (THE CANADIAN PRESS) Colin Robertson, a now-suspended member of a Thunder Bay, Ont., university's student council, is facing an attempted murder charge in the 2013 assault of B'nai Brith Canada's office in North Bay. Mr. Robertson, an 18-year-old student at Lakehead University, has been suspended from the university since the August 2013 assault. He has been charged with aggravated assault with a weapon, two counts of assault with a weapon and common nuisance, and is scheduled for a bail hearing today. The assault comes at a time when campus assaults and harassment of Jewish students and students with Jewish heritage continue to be a pervasive issue on North American campuses. B'nai Brith Canada has noted a reported 20 anti-Semitic assaults on Jewish students in Canada in 2014. Of those, 20 per cent involved anti-Semitic graffiti and 10 per cent involved anti-Semitic verbal assaults. Eleven Jewish students in Canada were victims of incidents reported to B'nai Brith Canada in the first five months of 2015 alone. In August 2013, a student named Colin Robertson allegedly threw stones at B'nai Brith Canada's office in North Bay, Ont. Mr. Robertson has been suspended from the University of Lakehead after being charged with multiple offences. (THE CANADIAN PRESS) According to the Anti-Defamation League, a number of other anti-Semitic attacks have been reported in various Canadian universities this year. "We are deeply concerned about the rise in the number of incidents targeting Jewish students on Canada's university campuses," wrote Karen Deschamps, director of education and campus security for B'nai Brith Canada, in a statement to the Jewish community. She noted the rise in assaults on Jewish students is troubling. "As we see and hear more incidents targeting Jewish students at their schools, we ask whether, as a society, we are becoming more hostile and intolerant to Jewish people," she wrote. A Liberal MP, who has spoken with Mr. Robertson's family, says Mr. Robertson was taking part in a protest in August 2013. "What seemed to be the case was that
